PREFACE

THE PRESENT Harvard Outline and Reading Lists for Oriental Art is a complete revision of the Outline and Bibliographies of Oriental Art published by the Harvard University Press in 1938, 1940, and 1945. This new edition includes a clarified rearrangement of the periods of Indian art and the introduction of sections on the later periods of Chinese art.

The outline is intended primarily for the use of students in introductory courses in all branches of Oriental art and as a handy reference book for everyone interested in the subject. It is arranged by countries and periods, and within these categories under headings of architecture, sculpture, and painting. The lists of examples are selective rather than complete: without wishing to seem didactic, the editor has listed specific, individual works of art representative of various periods and styles, choosing those examples that are most often reproduced in the standard works on Indian, Chinese, and Japanese art. In this connection it might be mentioned that this outline can be used with particular profit in conjunction with the illustrations published by the University Prints, Newton, Massachusetts, in their series devoted to Indian, Chinese, and Japanese art (Series 0-1, 0-2, and 0-3), which include reproductions of many of the subjects enumerated in the present publication.

The bibliographies are intended both for the beginner and as reference lists for the advanced student. The arrangement by generalized and specialized topics is designed to enable the reader to find his way into the subject as his interest dictates. These book lists do not pretend to completeness. Periodical articles are cited only when no books are available on the subject. Controversial or unreliable works have been deliberately omitted, as have a great many more advanced technical studies in European and Far Eastern languages.
